Arson seminar at PRJC

Commissioner of Insurance George Dale, reports his office is sponsoring an Arson Seminar at Pearl River Junior College in Moody Hall, on Tuesday, March 9 at 6 p.m. Mississippi ranks among the top states in the nation in the number of fire deaths. Statistics indicate the citizens of this state are paying 30 percent more for insurance just to cover the losses due to arson.

Dale states, "This seminar at Pearl River Junior College is designed to assist firefighters, especially the volunteer, law enforcement personnel, and all forms of investigators in becoming more aware of the arson problem in Mississippi."

Grover Dunn, president of Dunn, Forensic Science Laboratories in Atlanta, Ga.

ETV Briefs

Fred Rogers will host four new "Mister Rogers' Neighborhood" programs on the issue of discipline at 4 p.m. Monday through Thursday, March 13, at the Mississippi ETV Network.

The new programs take a broader-than-usual look at the subject, "because," says Rogers, "so many people think of discipline only as spanking, or making somebody do something they don't want to do, and it's really so much more than that."

Olympic skating star Peggy Fleming teaches Rogers how to spin on skates during the week of children's programs. She talks with Rogers about the discipline required in the long years of learning and mastering her sport. She and Rogers agree there are no magic in the learning process, but rather determination, patience and practice.

Handicapped sought for program

The Hancock County School District is continuing its participation in an ongoing statewide effort to identify, locate, and evaluate children through the age of 21 who are physically, mentally, communicatively, and emotionally handicapped.

This school district serves approximately eight percent of its school population through services of special education programs housed at Hancock North Central, Gulfview Elementary, and Charles B. Murphy Schools. In addition to these classes, pre-school program serving handicapped children ages three through five years is housed at Clearmont Harbor," says Mr. Harlin Hill, childfind Coordinator and supervisor of special education for the district.

"The earlier a child who is in need of special education can be identified, the greater the opportunity for providing appropriate educational experiences to meet that child's individual educational needs," states Hill.

Hill adds "Continued cooperation with and information from parents, other interested citizens of the county, and agencies is most important in determining present and future program needs as progress is made toward the goal of providing a free appropriate public education to all handicapped children."

All information which could identify an individual child will be maintained by the district and will be provided to other agencies only in accord with the Family Rights and Privacy Act and EHA-B," states Hill.

A parent of a child evaluated for possible identification as in need of special education services is guaranteed the right to inspect any information gathered in the evaluation process and to challenge its accuracy. No unauthorized person is given access to this information without a parent's consent," he adds.

Questions regarding collection, maintenance, and use of data collected about a child should be referred to Hill by calling 467-4477 or writing to him at P.O. Box 269, Bay St. Louis, Miss., 39520.

News Brief

VISION LOSS

Advanced technology, streamlined procedures and short recovery periods after surgery bring new encouragement to older people with vision problems. Glaucoma, most prevalent at middle age and after, can often be arrested with medication. Laser treatment and optical aids can benefit some persons with macular degeneration, a leading cause of vision loss among the elderly. And cataract can now be surgically treated by techniques that allow the patient to be up and around in just a few days—at home. Too often falling vision is accepted by older people as the price of aging. We received a telephone call on Wednesday and have also been stopped on the highway by several residents complaining about the amount of trash left on US-90 following the Mardi Gras Parade.

A drive down the highway on Friday of this week revealed a large amount of debris remains in the area.

Most of the trash was left by persons viewing the parade and we also noted a couple riding on the floats throwing down some empty bags.

The highway is not only commercial but there are persons who reside along the route and we are sure they must be upset about the mess left behind.

It seems to us that if we could take a litter bag along and use it to take it home and properly discard.

This would make our highways look a lot cleaner and eliminate the manhours it will take for workers to clear the debris.

We hope persons will be more understanding for the next parades and try and help keep our community clean.

We have lived here for a very long time, as well as many other residents and we sure have been fooled for a long time as to where Hwy. 603 begins.

Our elected officials apparently were in the dark just like us because we have heard them mention many requests for surveys to be taken on Highway 603 near I-10.

Highway 603 is nowhere near I-10, according to a Mississippi Designated Highway System chart we received from Bobby Moseley, an engineer with the department.

It states that Highway 603 begins on Mississippi 43 at or near Kiln and extends in a northerly direction to or near Nacaise.

So, officially Highway 603 does not begin at US-90, Waveland as just about everyone we have talked to has believed for years. The State says Highway 43 starts at the intersection of US-90, Waveland.

We will have to change our designation of the highway or try and get it changed to Highway 603 beginning at US-90 and Nicholson Avenue as it has been known by the local folks for many, many years.

Congratulations are in order for Alesia Smith on her being chosen as the Hancock County Chamber of Commerce for 1982.

We have known Alesia since she was born or when we say before, as we have known her mother and father since school days.

We are sure Hancock County can be proud of Alesia, as she will do a fine job representing us in the coming year.

Shoplifting seems to be on the increase in our area stores, as indicated by recent conversations with our local managers.

The merchants are now at a point where they are placing charges against those caught, because shoplifting is on the increase.

We are tired of paying more when we purchase merchandise because someone else is stealing from the merchants.

It does not pay for shoplifting, as court costs are increasing as well as fines.

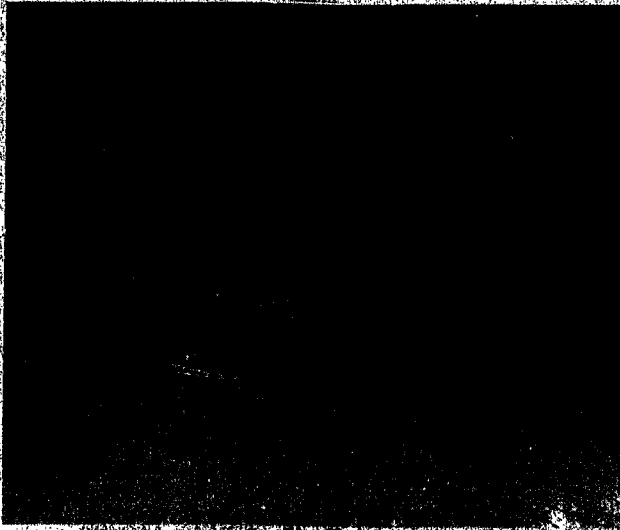

We hope the judges will continue enforcing the anti-shoplifting laws and issue stiffer fines and sentences for those caught in the act.

BE A GOOD CITIZEN

A person is guilty of violating a city ordinance or law if garbage or refuse from human use shall be exposed on the street or in any yard within the city limits. Does your police department enforce the law? Take a look around and judge for yourself.

HANCOCK COUNTY CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

CLEAN-UP AND BE A GOOD CITIZEN

MARDI GRAS AFTERMATH—The remains of debris from the Triton Parade could still be seen Friday morning along US-90 where careless revelers left their trash. It seems persons could be more cautious and take their trash home after having a good time at the parades.

Pointers given for aiding childbirth

Most policemen and many taxicab drivers have the number of 1-800-4-A-MIDWINTER on their emergency call buttons. The number is a reminder to the police officer or taxicab driver that if a woman is in labor, they should take her to the hospital. And in most of these instances the report concludes with "Mother and child are doing fine."

If you're faced with a woman obviously in labor, what to do? If the contractions are two to three minutes apart, if she feels the urge to push down, or if the baby's head is visible, birth will usually occur very soon, says the American Medical Association's Handbook of First Aid and Emergency Care.

If at all possible, summon a doctor. Sometimes a doctor can give instructions over the phone. Try to stay calm, remembering that most births occur naturally and normally. Do not try to delay birth of the baby.

Get the bed ready with clean sheets, with a rubber sheet underneath if available. If no bed is available, use clean cloths, clothing or newspapers under the mother's hips and thighs on the floor or ground.

Have the mother lie on her back with knees bent and knees and thighs wide apart.

Wash your hands with soap and water. Sterilize scissors or knife in boiling water for at least five minutes, or hold over a flame for 30 seconds. This is to be ready to cut the cord. Have a clean sheet, cotton blanket or towel ready to wrap the baby. Clean, strong string, white shoe laces or a strip of cloth can serve to tie the cord.

Do not place your hands or other objects in the vagina and do not interfere with the delivery. Do not touch the baby until it is completely out. Once and support the head to keep it free of blood and secretions.

Check to make sure the umbilical cord is not wrapped around the baby's neck. If it is, gently and quickly slip the cord over the baby's head. If it can't be unwrapped, cut it. Once head and neck are out the baby will turn himself on his side to allow for birth of the shoulders.

To help start breathing, hold the baby with head lower than feet. Support head and body with one hand while grasping legs and ankles with the other. Wipe the mouth and nose gently with sterile gauze or clean cloth. If baby has not cried, slip fingers against the bottom. If breathing does not begin, give artificial respiration with mouth-to-mouth technique.

Use gentle puffs every three seconds. Once breathing starts, wrap the infant in a sheet and place baby on his side on the clean sheet or blanket with head toward the mother. Warm about five minutes. Wipe the cord at the mother will be at the hospital shortly, leaving the cord alone.

After the cord, tie a clean string around the cord at least four inches from the baby's body. Tie another piece around the cord about five inches from the baby's body. Cut between the two ties.

Mothers of the afterbirth usually come about 10 minutes after delivery. It is usually preceded by a rush of dark red blood.

Place sanitary napkins over a clean cloth. Do not clean the vagina.

Do not give alcohol or drugs.

And a word of caution: Do not attempt to deliver a baby if you are not a trained professional. If you are a trained professional, do not attempt to deliver a baby if you are not a trained professional.

FROM THE GOVERNOR'S OFFICE

An adept, smiling police officer is a popular character in television and movie comedy, but in real life the serious responsibilities of police work require high standards in law enforcement officer selection and training.

Mississippi is taking a firm step in this direction. The Board of Law Enforcement Officers' Standards and Training (BLEOST), established last July by the Legislature, has set minimum standards for law enforcement officer appointments to help ensure that inept or unscrupulous individuals don't find their way into Mississippi law enforcement.

A candidate must be at least 21 years old, have graduated from an accredited high school or possess a General Educational Development (GED) certificate; be a U.S. citizen; have evidence of mental and physical well-being from a licensed medical doctor; have fingerprints checked by the FBI and the Mississippi Highway Safety Patrol Criminal Investigation Bureau, and have evidence of good moral character.

BLEOST accredited the Mississippi Law Enforcement Officers' Training Academy, the Hattiesburg Police Department Training Center and the Jackson Police Department Training Center for law enforcement officer training.

A professional library, with training aids available for state agencies and political subdivisions was established at the State Academy.

Officer training and education is funded by fine assessments. Thus far more than $600,000 has been collected. Plans call for publishing a Minimum Standards for Training newsletter to inform law enforcement agencies of events and developments that will involve their personnel and government units.

General Sidney B. Berry, Mississippi commissioner of public safety, is chairman of BLEOST, and Sheriff Jesse Strider of Grenada County is vice chairman.

Other members are Attorney General Bill Allain; Chief Donald Butler of the Mississippi Highway Safety Patrol; Batesville Mayor Bobby Baker; president of the Mississippi Municipal Association; Joe Satch, president of the Mississippi Association of Supervisors; Chief Larkin Smith of the Gulfport Police Department; John R. Young, Corinth district attorney; and Prof. Tyler Fletcher of the University of Southern Mississippi.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Extension Service commended personnel professionalism

Editor
Sea Coast Echo
Bay St. Louis

Gentlemen:
At a time when many government programs are under critical scrutiny, I would like to offer the following positive comment.

John Davis, area horticulture specialist for the Mississippi Cooperative Extension Service, in conjunction with John Smith, Hancock County agent, has just completed a four-session seminar on residential landscaping at the Extension auditorium in Bay St. Louis.

This seminar was free to anyone who wished to attend. My husband and I found the series well-planned and executed, informative and interesting. Mr. Davis and Mr. Smith were not only very knowledgeable, but they went out of their way to answer questions and offer expert assistance.

We wish to commend these gentlemen who in practice and spirit represent the best in governmental service.

You're being ripped off for more than $20 each year.

By shoplifters.

Last year shoplifters stole between $4 and $5 billion worth of merchandise. That's like stealing over $20 from each American. Shoplifting costs stores, and you, more than merchandise. Prices go up to cover the losses incurred by shoplifting. Dollars spent for special security devices, extra guards, insurance, alarm systems and legal counsel are eventually absorbed by you, the consumer. Stores that do it the hard way, with the help of law officers, who lose countless man-hours handling shoplifters. And yet, the taxpayer must foot the bill for the job that shoplifting does through the courts and the police. How can you help shoplifting? By being concerned. And informed. By urging your local officials to crack down on shoplifting. And by reporting any shoplifting activity to the police.

Phone company eyeing seven-region division

The Bell System's 22 principally owned operating telephone companies nationwide will be divided into seven regions proposed by the American Telephone and Telegraph Company and its operating companies.

This will be used as a basis for the further planning which must be accomplished to prepare for the divestiture of its local exchanges, as required by the terms of a proposed consent decree signed last month, a company spokesman says.

"The Bell operating companies would remain as separate corporations as they are now. They would retain the same territories as they do now," the spokesman reports.

The plan contemplates the company be organized regionally as:

—South Central Bell Telephone Company and

Southern Bell Telephone Company;

—New England Telephone and Telegraph Company and New York Telephone Company;

—Bell of Pennsylvania, the Diamond State Telephone Company, the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Companies (Virginia, West Virginia, Maryland and the District of Columbia) and New Jersey Bell Telephone Company;

—Illinois Bell Telephone Company, Indiana Bell Telephone Company, Michigan Bell Telephone Company, Ohio Bell Telephone Company, and Wisconsin Telephone Company;

—Southwestern Bell Telephone Company;

—Mountain States Telephone and Telegraph Company, Northwestern Bell Telephone Company, and Pacific Northwest Bell

Telephone Company; —Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Company and the Bell Telephone Company of Nevada.

Wallace R. Bunn, South Central Bell President, says, "I want to emphasize that this is a planning model in which the regional concept is a separation of AT&T Co. assets into regions, not a merger of companies."

The planning model was developed by a team of Bell System presidents and AT&T officers. "I was privileged to serve as a member of that task force," he reports.

"The Bell operating companies will continue to participate in developing the structure of the seven regions," Bunn notes.

"This arrangement is intended to make the divestiture largely transparent to Bell System customers, but would act to provide financial strength. There would be no corporate linkage as between regions; each would be a separate entity. The regions would be roughly comparable with respect to their assets," Bunn explains.

In disclosing the seven-region planning model, AT&T Chairman Charles L. Brown described the organizational configuration as "a planning model."

"This is a reasonable template against which we can test all of the decisions which will have to be made in order to establish these companies in good shape on their own. We must proceed with our planning in terms of two basic parameters: good service, sustained by good earnings—and this configuration looks promising in terms of these considerations," Brown says.

"The structure model was developed and recommended recently by a Bell operating company task force consisting

They worked with William S. Cappel Jr., AT&T vice chairman and chief financial officer, and Howard J. Trienens, AT&T vice president and general counsel.

There are five other Bell operating company presidential task forces working in parallel, a company spokesman reports.

One group will identify those functions which can best be accomplished on a centralized basis for the prospective exchange companies and the structural arrangements for the provision of those functions.

A personnel task force will identify and analyze human resources and labor relations considerations. Another group will deal with exchange area boundaries for the prospective exchange companies as specified in the decree.

An asset assignment study group will be responsible for the overall development and implementation of plans for assigning telephone plant as between AT&T and the companies to be divested, as called for by the decree.

A group on access charges will identify and analyze financial, operational, regulatory and other issues with respect to access charge tariffs and their implementation.

The full plan for divestiture of the 22 Bell companies and their local exchange and exchange access facilities does not need to be filed with the Department of Justice until six months after the decree becomes effective," the spokesman reports.

"The decree itself is subject to approval by Federal Judge Harold H. Greene and no decision on his part is anticipated until he has concluded further procedures including a period for public comment and reply which is expected to continue into early May," the spokesman adds.
